CITY DADS MEET AFTER LAST WEEK ADJOURNMENT

County Supervisors Request All Cities Ask Immediate Highway Construction

The Daly City Council met Monday evening in adjourned session, with all members answering to roll call.

A resolution was read which had been adopted by the County Board of Supervisors requesting the immediate construction of that section of the Oceanshore Highway from Sharp's Park in San Mateo County to the City and County of San Francisco by the State Highway Commission. One section of the resolution asked all cities and towns in this county to communicate with the Highway Commission in support of the board's request. The city clerk was instructed to write the letter requested. A member of the council stated the Highway Commission has available $100,000 for this purpose, which sum, it was estimated. would complete the section from Thornton to Edgewater.

The council having adopted a resolution to continue the supervision of play for children of elementary school age on the school grounds on Saturdays, it was decided to reappoint the same members as formerly composed the Recreation Commission. These are: Mrs. D. Garibaldi, Mrs. M. Hanselman, Mrs. Lillian Landini, Mrs. Mazie Boyle and Mrs. Ann Eason.

By unanimous vote, on roll call, the city clerk was instructed to communicate with the County Board of Supervisors and inform them the council had adopted a motion requesting the board to appropriate $12,500 to complete improvements incidental to the widening of that portion of Mission street lying in Daly City.

A motion was adopted to offer the use of the City Hall court room to Justice of the Peace elect W. H. Clay at a monthly rental of $25. The clerk was instructed to communicate this offer to Mr. Clay.

Water Superintendent Bodien said the city owned an old truck which has been unused for some time and asked permission to sell same for not less than $25. On motion, the request was granted and the chairman of the council was authorized to transfer ownership slip if purchaser is secured.

Bills for seven fire companies for $100 each were approved and warrants ordered drawn for payment of same.

Council adjourned to meet in regular session Monday evening, December 24.

THE TRUE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS

(By Ann Eason)

As the Christmas season approaches, and we cast back in retrospect over the events of our own lives for the past year, what report can we make of the twelve months given to us?

Perhaps we have not achieved success in a material way; perhaps we have not done anything of a startling nature; perhaps we have signally failed to reach the goal we had set for ourselves a year ago.

When we hear the man in the street say, "I wish Christmas would never come," or "I wish Christmas was over," we hear only the shell of a man speaking. What he means to convey is that he is tired of the mad orgy of spending and merry making; which has come to be associated with Christmas, and which he knows is not at all in accord with the true spirit of that holiday.

The bringing of gifts may be well if the gift brings happiness, but if its chief virtue lies in the value then Christmas becomes only a medium of exchanges in gifts.

Would it not be well at this Christmas season—in this year which has brought so many disappointments, and so many heartaches—to look about us and see to it that someone in need is made happy.

To one who would approach the Christmastide in the proper spirit it means that the words "service," "cheer," "Courage," "kindness," "faith" and "happiness' should be uppermost in mind.

Attempted Suicide

Mrs. Nellie Hall, 39, proprietor of a Salada Beach grocery store, attempted to commit suicide by taking poison at her home early last Friday morning, according to police.

She was treated at the Villa Sanitarium. Physicians there say she will recover.

Mrs. Hall claims she was "tired of being alone."

A program of kiddie talent has been arranged by Miss Beatrice Gaspar, composed of pupils of her dancing classes. There will also be a concert by our own Daly City Band.

Plenty of presents have been secured to provide all the children who attend the entertainment.

Be sure to bring the children to the City Hall this Saturday evening (tomorrow) and show them a good time!

COUPLE INJURED IN COLLISION AS CAR OVERTURNS

In an early morning automobile collision on Tuesday of this week at Knowles avenue and Mission street, two residents of Daly City were badly hurt.

James E. Morgan, 59, and his daughter, Carmella Morgan, 18, of 59 Miriam street, sustained serious and painful injuries in the accident.

The Morgan car was struck on the side by the automobile of L. Garetta of Colma and overturned.

Morgan and his daughter were removed to the Villa Sanitarium in an ambulance. There it was found that Morgan had sustained a deeply lacerated right hand and a possible fracture of that member. Miss Morgan is suffering from two broken collar bones, a fractured arm and internal injuries.

Garetta was taken to the sanitarium in the police car, where he received treatment for a bruised chest and deeply lacerated chin.

The Morgan car was badly damaged in the wreck.

Carmella Morgan was so seriously injured in the accident that, according to the latest report from the hospital, she may be compelled to remain at that institution and undergo treatment for, possibly, three months.

BOOK WEEK AT THE DALY CITY LIBRARY

Book week was celebrated this week at the Daly City Library. Many children have spent happy hours viewing the exhibit of new children's books and admiring the illustrations, which included a model covered wagon, humpty Dumpty, Scamper Rabbit and the painting of the Black Tan Dog.

A new framed drawing of two horses is hanging in a very conspicious place for all to see and admire. The drawing is the work of a local grammar school student.

Mrs. Jean O'Rourke, the libriarian in charge, wishes to announce that the new books on display will be available for distribution on December 26.

YOUNG KELPIES DRAW ATTENTION

Pair of Dogs Little Known Here Sent From Australia To Daly City Citizen

These are two kelpies over at the Heather Farm of J. W. Marchbank near Walnut Creek. The youngsters are of a little known breed of dogs and were sent up from Australia by Harry Marsden, a noted sportsman of 'down under," and have lost little time in making themselves at home at the thoroughbred nursery. The kelpie is an especially alert kind of puppy and a remarkable fellow when it comes to general duty around a farm.

The kelpie's origin is wrapped in mystery and few have been seen in this vicinity. An Australian expert goes as far as to say he doesn't know where the kelpie came from, and doesn't think anyone knows.

One group of fanciers thinks the kelpie comes from the border dogs of England-Scotland; another, apparently just as wise, tells you that he originated in Spain and found his way by the Malay Islands to Australia, where he roamed long before the Europeans arrived.

The name is almost as mysterious as the breed itself. One story is that a fancier had a bitch by the name of Kelpie showing at trials and that she was such a brilliant winner her progeny was sought by other sheep owners. Her pups were referred to as "kelpies," and gradually the breed were called by that name.

The fox-like head of the kelpie has suggested to some that he descends from the fox. As to that, an expert exclaims: "Oh yeah; Who had the fox as the origin. I doubt it. The vulpine cannot mate with the canine."

The kelpie, capable of untiring work, is not too large or too small to be useful as a companion for a stroll, or as house guard. He thrives on plenty of exercise; ten miles a day is not overdoing it. He's a lively, reliable dog-pal.

WELL BABY CLINIC HAS XMAS TREE

The Well Baby Clinic of Daly City held its last session of the year on Wednesday of this week.

Officers for the year are: President, Mazie Boyle; Treasurer, Madge Woodside; Secretary, Eva Page; Maynard Chesney and Lillian Landini; Physician, Dr. Hildagrave Henderson of the Children's Hospital.

Car Stolen Here

Fred Rebagliedi, of Montgomery street, San Francisco, parked his car in front of the Tip Top Restaurant on Mission street about 3:50 a. m. last Sunday. When he came out to go home he found it gone.

The loser reported his loss to local police. They broadcasted the decription of the car over S.F.P.D. Radio.

DALY CITY DRUG STORE IS LOOTED BY TWO BANDITS

Push Proprietor Into Phone Booth And Take Cash And Bottle Of Booze

Two young unmasked bandits, who held up D. N. Edwards' Drug Store on Mission street near Bepler and escaped with considerable cash and a bottle of whiskey are being sought by local police.

One of the robbers walked into the store Sunday evening and drew a gun and commanded Edward's, who was alone at the time, to enter the telephone booth in the rear of the store sit down and told him to stay there and keep still.

The bandit then signaled his confederate, who entered the store and looted the cash register. As they were leaving, one of them helped himself to a bottle of rare old whiskey at the suggestion of his partner.

The proprietor, who had been sitting on the floor of the booth, rushed outside in an attempt to obtain the license number of the bandits car, but they were out of sight.

Edwards later reported the holdup to Chief of Police John T. Doyle, who has been conducting the search for the bandits. The robbers were described as being between 30 and 35 years of age and fairly well dressed.

SCOTT EXCELLENT IN HEROIC ROLE

Heading an impressive cast which includes Gail Patrick, Monte Blue, Raymond Hatton and Jan Duggan, Randolph Scott returns for another of his hard-riding, whirlwind fighting and thrilling roles in the Paramount picturization of the Zane Grey "Wagon Wheels," coming to the Daly City Theater December 23 and 24.

In this handsomely directed and mounted film, which details some of the actual and historic adventures that beset the sturdy pioneers who took the first wagon train across the country in 1844 to Oregon, Scott plays the role of an Indian-fighting frontier scout. He wins the love of a lovely widow and her child, when he saves the entire caravan from death at the hands of the savages.

Monte Blue is excellent as the renegade halfbreed, through whose evil machinations the wagon train is almost captured by Indians, and as

Scott's rival in love. Miss Patrick, who has recently played dramatic characterizations in "Death Takes a Holiday" and "Murder at the Vanities," is stunning, attractive and extremely convincing as the heroine.

Much of the comedy relief of this excellent film is furnished by the middle aged romance between Jan Duggan, who played the spinster in W. C. Fields "The Old Fashioned Way," and Olin Howland, who courts her for an opportunity to steal the chickens she is transporting across the country.

There is one other little actor, very little in fact, who we think will bear watching in the future. He is Billy Lee, four years old, and the newest of Hollywood's juvenile actors, who brightened every scene in which he appeared with his bright smile and ingratiating manner.

All in all, "Wagon Wheels" is about as satisfactory a combination of comedy, drama, romance and thrills as you could see.

The second feature will be "Let's Try Again," with Diana Wynyard and Clive Brooks.

Wedding Bells

LEGION URGES EARLY HIGHWAY BUILDING

By J. W. MARCHBANK
(Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work)

Recently the opinion was expressed by an Alaskan mining man that the territory up north can support a million more inhabitants. The estimate is far too conservative. I have said time after time that Alaska can easily take care of at least 6,000,000 of the right kind of self-reliant youth and men of middle age. It is the grandest opportunity of the ages, that presented by the teeming land up towrd the arctic circle.

"Decent roads" are one of the crying needs that the press is emphasizing every time a miner of vision comes back to the states for a spell and is given a chance to tell what should be done in the immediate future.

Not so long ago John E. Barrett, dean of Copper River mining men, said a whole lot in a few words. Listen to these wise observations:

All Alaska needs is decent roads, a government subsidized flying service, government assistance for prospectors in the way of equipment and aerial transportation, a million more inhabitants, and we'll be able to take care of Uncle Sam under any stress or strain.

Alaska is just getting under way. The country has never really been scratched, and every pound of powder that is being burned up there on a decent looking prospect is adding a lot of wealth to the territory.

The United States of America wants gold and it seems to me that when the time comes that they want it badly enough they'll spend a few dollars in advance to make it possible for mining men to land gold manufacturing equipment on Alaskan properties, and give them a chance to ease off the shortage.

The American Legion is occupied with a carefully planned campaign for putting over the Alaska Highway project in a big way. The state of Washington department of the great national organization made a strong showing at the convention at Miami and is at present bending every effort to have the authorities make an early start for the completion of the road.

The Alaska Highway, or the International Highway as it is often called, will extend from the Pacific Northwest to Fairbanks, Alaska. Eventually it is designed to have the road as part of an Inter-American Highway System, extending from Alaska and Canada on the north to the Argentine Republic and Chile on the south.

It is the notion of the Legionnaires that the highway plan will be an important factor in promoting mutual understanding and good-will among the nations of the New World.

The employment angle of the construction of the long artery also appeals to the members of the legion. In resolutions adopted by the Washington Department, it is tersely said:

"Whereas, The project has been found feasible and practicable by the commissions duly papointed to survey and report upon the project; and,

"Whereas, The project will provide work for many unemployed, will encourage tourist traffic throughout the Pacific Northwest and will greatly aid in developing Alaska, Western Canada and the Pacific Northwest generally; and in time the project will be self-liquidating and self-maintaining; and,

"Whereas, The project is of a nonpartisan nature;

"Now, therefore, Be It Resolved, That the Department of Washington of the American Legion, in regular convention assembled, goes on record of the proposed construction of a highway connecting the highways of the Pacific Northwest with Fairbanks, Alaska, through British Columbia, Yukon Territory, and with such by-passes to the Pacific Coast as may be desired by the governments co-operating and concerned.

"Be it Further Resolved, That we pledge our efforts and continued support to the proper legislation looking toward the surveying and construction of the highway, and that we will assist the project in every feasible way."

IS THIS THE WAY WE CAN BUILD UP OUR COMMUNITY

The editor has before him a small check book blotter advertising an institution located in Daly City, which solicits the patronage of citizens in this community; and, no doubt, has secured considerable business here.

This place has been quite recently opened, and several establishments conducting the same type of business it is doing have been in operation here for a number of years and have given reasonable and efficient service to our people.

The field, while possibly not overcrowded in this line, has been well filled, hardly leaving room for more competition. The citizens conducting these latter places of business have patronized home industry—in other words, when in need of any commodity they were able to procure from business men in Daly City, they have not gone elsewhere to purchase work or supplies obtainable from local merchants. This is commendable and as it properly should be.

This particular article has to do with the business of the cleaning, dyeing and repairing of clothing and wearing apparel.

On scrutinizing the blotter of the new firm first mentioned in this article, we find that it bears the imprint of a Los Angeles printing trades label and the printing was, therefore, done in Los Angeles and, of course, the money spent for that work, instead of bnefitting any citizens of our own community, only assisted those of the southern city. This firm is soliciting business on the plea that it conducts a union establishment. While that may be true, one of the cardinal principles of all trades unions is to "patronize home industry"—or, putting it in another form, spend your money with your home merchants, who help support your town and make the community a more liveable place.

While this article has to do with this particular industry, in future you will hear more along the same lines. There are numerous individuals, firms and organizations in Daly City who are continually asking and expecting the support of the citizens of this community, yet, when possible to patronize their home merchants and business men, spend their money out of the city for commodities they are in need of and which could be procured here.

BAND UNIFORM DANCE SUCCESS

Benefit Ball Sponsored By Joint Committee Draws Crowd For Big Time

A goodly number of lovers of terpsichore turned out in Colma last Saturday evening. The occasion was a benefit dance, sponsored by the Community Welfare Association and the proceeds were donated to the Uniform Fund of the Daly City Band.

The joint committee from both organizations had made the arrangements with the greatest care, and all who attended reported an enjoyable evening.

A large basket of groceries was raffled during the evening.

Three door prizes were given away. The prizes and their winners were: First prize, $10 in cash, went to C. Geran, 2265 Mission street; second, a sofa pillow, was won by S. Steele, 162 Valencia street; and H. T. Rolff of 200 Crocker avenue received third prize, also a pretty sofa pillow.

While there was quite a crowd in attendance, considering the worthiness of the cause, there should have been more. However, the number of counter attractions that evening probably accounted for this.

More entertainments of this nature are planned in the future to help swell the band treasury, and the boys expect the citizens to turn out and help the cause in large numbers.

OUR HOME TOWN BASEBALL TEAM

(By Al Gould)

Next Sunday afternoon at two o'clock on the Jackson diamond, Jeff Martin's Daly City baseball team will face the improved American Building Maintenance nine in their opening game of the second half series of the Recreation Double "A" League.

This local team is stronger than any other team in the league, man for man, according to figures compiled from the first half series, from October 7 to December 9.

Pat Holmes is a great pitcher, one of the best in the league; not only from the hurling standpoint, but for his fast fielding abiliy and his heavy batting strength.

With Bevilacqua behind the bat, there is twice the confidence in the team. He inspires his team mates, guides the pitcher, is cool and level-headed and is deadly to base stealers. "Bev" completes, with Holmes, a battery of strength and a winning combination.

The great improvement in the local infield is that of Pete Dinneen. Since Pete began to hustle and realized that he shouldn't always expect perfect throws, he is rapidly advancing to a first class first sacker.

Our second baseman, Charlie Aiello, returns to the lineup Sunday. This youngster is an expert at knowing when the runner is about to steal; he can tag a runner with accuracy; is skillful at going back for fly balls into "No Man's Land" and co-operates with the shortstop as the pivot for double plays.

Bill Kirby, one of the most promising youngsters of the Bay District, is covering the shortstop position. He is noted for his skill in handling ground balls; accuracy in throwing to bases; ability to tag a runner and skill in going to the short outfield for tantalizing flies.

Regis, who covers the hot corner, fields bunts very fast and throws to the bases with unbelievable speed. He is both fast and accurate on the throw across the diamond to first base.

With Harry Maloney in left, batting for 333; Hughie Smith in center,hitting for 300; and Joe Albrecht in right, still in a batting slump and batting for an even 200, Manager Martin has three of the best "fly hawks" in the league.

With a winning battery, a high class infield and an outstanding outfield, as a team batting for 331 and fielding for 967, much can be expected from our local boys. Watch the results!

Manager Martin has signed George Kondeff, catcher for the El Rey Beer nine of the Stadium League; Jimmy Jordanoff, who played second base for the Rough Rider Cords during the first half, and Lefty Smith, pitching ace of the strong Postoffice team. With this added strength, the local boys should easily take the series.

NEW ARCHITECTURE TO BE REVEALED AT PACIFIC EXPOSITION

Flowers and plants play a major part in a new style of architecture to be featured at the California Pacific International Exposition, opening May 29 of next year.

Fresh and poignantly Western, the design takes inspiration from the Indian pueblos of the Southwest and color from the flowering gardens of southern California. Indain builders relied on the effect of simple mass; ornamentation was lacking in their style.

Exposition architects have carried forward the primitive effect and accomplished decoration through the novel use of living plants and flowers. The decorative treatment of each building embodies the use of concealed cornice and roof troughs, from which living plants will be trained to accomplish the effect of color and decoration.

Griffin recently spent several months in Russia and had many experiences to relate. Pictures and souveniers illustrated many points in his talk. Mrs. M. H. Brady presided at the meeting.

During the evening Earl Berkeley of San Francisco spoke on the annual Veteran's fete to be held in that city in February.

Mrs. Beatrice Camgros of Burlingame will be the chairman in charge and the names of her assisting committee will be announced in a short time.

Other visitors at the meeting from whom short talks were heard included Mrs. Rose Wentworth, Mrs. Louise Murasky and George Wentworth, all of San Francisco and prominent in Legion circles.

From the interest shown in forming a glee club, plans will proceed along that line and all interested are requested to meet in South San Francisco Legion Hall one-half hour before the next regular meeting of the council on Friday, January 11 at eight o'clock.

Daly City unit, Mrs. Marcie Trier, president, is the first unit in the county to obtain its quota in membership and will receive the prize offered by Mrs. Brady, to be awarded at the next meeting.

AUTO ASSOCIATION REAFFIRMS STAND ON GAS TAX DIVERSION

Proposals at the coming session of the Legislature to divert gasoline tax money from its pledged purposes of highway construction and maintenance will be vigorously opposed by the California State Automobile Association, it is announced in a statement issued by the motorists organization. Citing the fact that various diversion plans have come to the surface with approach of the legislative session, the automobile association declares its attitude as follows:

"With plain indications that the gasoline tax will again be the target of raids in one guise or another at the approaching session of the state Legislature, the board of directors of the California State Automobile Association has removed any doubt, if any there could be, as to the attitude of the association toward such proposals. The board has reaffirmed its previously declared policy with respect to taxation on motorists as a class and the use of funds derived therefrom, holding that it should and will oppose any increase of special taxes on motorists and will likewise oppose any diversion of the gasoline tax from application to street and highway construction and maintenance.

"In this reaffirmation of policy the board is simply adhering to a position the association has traditionally maintained on the subject of diversion of the gasoline tax. It is a position evidently supported by an overwhelming majority of the people, as shown by their vote on the last occasion when the question was put to them at a state election.

"Admittedly California still faces a grave crisis in the matter of state finances. As citizens nd taxpayers, motorists share in the common desire for a fair and equitable method of meeting the situation. As motorists, however, they are unwilling that motor car owners shall be singled out to bear a special added share of the common burden. The declared policy of the automobile association supports that attitude unreservedly."

FIRE COMMISSION TO SERVE OUTSIDE AREAS APPOINTED

Members of a San Mateo County Fire Commission, which will seek a means of giving more adequate fire protection to areas lying outside of incorporated municipalities, was appointed Monday by the chairman of the Board of Supervisors.

Members of the commission include Assistant Fire Chief Andrew P. Chesnew, Daly City; Fire Chief Hugh Morris, San Mateo; Fire Chief Thomas Cuff, Menlo Park; Fire Chief Frank Fetter, Half Moon Bay; and Fire Chief William G. Dessin, Burlingame. These will plan the best method for solving the problem.

News of the Week

Controller Ray L. Riley has announced that the state will be unable to make its December apportionment of $6,881,407 to public schools. To avoid default, a bond charge payment of $2,673,485 must be made during the month, Riley said. County school superintendents have been informed that the state will resume its monthly payments in January.

One of the largest and best equipped transient relief centers in the country has been opened in Los Angeles. The four-story structure provides showers, lockers, first-aid rooms, educational and recreational facilities and dormitories for jobless and transient men. Quarters are maintained for 500 men, with capacity for more in emergencies. The shelter is not a permanent home, the "guests" being limited to a 48-hour stay, many of them being sent to Federal work camps in forest and mountain areas of California.

Lindsay has taken the Christmas holiday season seriously this year. A contest was held and prizes awarded for the best living Christmas trees and for the best decorated tree displayed in home windows.

Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes has approved a grant of $1,183,000 from PWA funds for the construction and improvement of elementary and high schools in Oakland. Seventy per cent of the money must be repaid the government, while the remainder is an outright gift. Officials of the board of education say the entire sum will not be used, at least during this fiscal year.

San Francisco Bay just wasn't big enough for the ferryboat Calistoga and the liner Ruth Alexander, so each tried to push each other out of the way. Collision of the two boats endangered over 400 pasengers and damage in excess of $100,000 was done. Although crippled, both boats were able to dock under their own power.

The California Highway Commission has decided to buy the toll road which runs between Sears Point and the east bank of the Napa River. The purchase price, $418,000, will be paid over a period of five years.

Governor Merriam's hint about imposing an income tax on Californians has met with immediate disapproval by the chambers of commerce of the state's two largest cities. The San Francisco group believes that "income taxes should be confined to the federal government," while the Los Angeles organization thinks such a tax would discourage California development "more quickly than any other type of taxation which could be devised."

After being tethered to a post for seven hours, three-year-old Nick Jabin, son of uneducated Russian parents, was rescued by neighbors and Santa Rosa police. The mother had gone shopping and had taken this means of keping him from running away. After determining that the woman meant no harm to her child, authorities have sent the boy to the Sonoma State Home for the Feeble-minded. He was found to be mentally subnormal.

Governor Merriam continued his shakeup of state jobs by appointing Harry Lutgens to replace Dr. J. M. Toner as director of the department of institutions. Lutgens, San Rafael publisher and former private secretary under Governor Richardson, will receive $6000 a year as director. Also, he has appointed J. Mortimer Clark, Long Beach realtor, as state real estate commissioner; Charles M. Cotton, Los Angeles, as member of the state fish and game commission; and Professor Emanuel Fritz, University of California, as member of the state forestry board. The Governor has accepted the resignation of Justus S. Craemer, publisher, as his private secretary.

Vierling Kersey, California's superintendent of schools, has been elected the 1935 president of the national council of state superintendents and commissioners of education at its Washington, D. C., convention.

After being suspended for a month and a half, Celeste Strack, graduate student at U. C. L. A., has finally been reinstated by Dr. Robert G. Sproul, university president. Miss Stack was ousted with four other students recently on charges of radical activities. The others, all men, were pardoned several weeks ago.

In one of the most densely populated counties in America, Los Angeles, one person in every five is on the relief rolls. December relief budgets total $4,300,000. In an effort to alleviate this situation, relief officials have been holding semi-secret meetings. Relief funds must be reduced if government collapse is to be averted, officials said.

Leopold Stokowski, famous Philadelphia symphony orchestra leader, is to become a farmer. He has already purchased a ranch in California and will move here soon. When dismayed music lovers asked him if he planned to forget his music, he said not at all but that he wanted to import oriental plants and make them grow in California.

An intensive campaign against lawbreaking motorists is being conducted by Burlingame in order to protect citizens during the Christmas holidays.

Aunt Martha's Christmas

By Alice B. Palmer

MEMORIES of the long ago kept ringing like sleighbells in the ears of dear old Aunt Martha as she sat alone in her favorite window seat by the side of some old-fashioned geraniums and pondered the fact of its being Christmas eve.

She looked outside beyond the icicles which hung like grim sentinels toward the snow-coated trees and heavy drifts heaped high by the wayside and she was reminded of the beautiful story of "Snowbound." "But in that home there had been people—people and people, gentle and boisterous voices, everywhere."

"This will never do," suddenly spoke Martha Graham, rousing herself and trying to shake off the haunting memories. "I must prepare for a joyous, Merry Christmas just as if those people were really here."

With a spirit of youthfulness beyond ordinary endurance, Aunt Martha dashed kitchenward, every fibre of her being enriched by the Christmas spirit. The next moment she was busily engaged in preparation of all the holiday delicacies which she thought these people would like.

Soon delicious odors of sizzling doughnuts and soft sour milk cookies, such as only Aunt Martha could make, were in evidence.

When all was completed, together with a pitcher of steaming hot chocolate, Aunt Martha sat down and realized that there were no people to partake of her carefully prepared delicacies.

With a start, she realized that she heard voices, real voices, not visionary ones, but loud wild shouts coming from without. She could scarcely see through the blinding snowstorm.

Now she actually heard footsteps! "It must be true!" thought Aunt Martha, as she threw open the door. Sure enough there they were, her imaginary "Snowbound" people for whom she had been preparing the Yuletide feast.

'Twas the joyous carol singers. They had become lost in the snowstorm and were almost frozen.

"Come in! Come in!" cried dear old Aunt Martha.

Then followed such a Christmas welcome and greeting as they had never received before. Aunt Martha, their hostess, sat at the head of the table smiling and beaming, passing her Christmas goodies and pouring out the steaming hot chocolate. She secretly rejoiced as she accepted the carol singers as an answer to her loving thought of service on Christmas eve.

A Christmas Introduction

By Florence Harris Wells

PETER MANLEY, the mail carrier, looked at the gay red letter he was delivering at the door of Miss Waters' apartment two days before Christmas. Miss Waters had requested that Peter leave her mail on the table by her door. Peter did so. He silently adored the trim, competent little seamstress.

Peter couldn't help but read what was on letters and this time it was so surprising Peter fairly gasped; for there in a plain, capable hand were the words, "From P. Manley." This was an opportunity Peter was quick to seize. He knocked briskly on the door. No response. All was perfectly still within. Peter hastily drew an arrow on the envelope pointing to the name and wrote, "This is my name," and signed it, "Your mail carrier." Peter was hopeful it might lead to closer acquaintance; just how he had not exactly figured out.

The next morning Peter ascended the steps to Miss Waters' apartment, his hands full of Christmas letters and his mind and heart eagerly anticipating something, though he didn't know what. But even Peter was unprepared for the door of the apartment being flung open and the little seamstress eagerly confronting him:

"Are you Peter Manley?"

"I'm sure not anybody else," Peter answered breathlessly.

"Were you in the war and did you have a twin brother, Porter?" the little seamstress questioned.

"I sure did," Peter was startled, but he managed to stammer that Porter had been killed in that war.

"But he wasn't killed," Miss Waters insisted. "He was just reported killed. He's married to my sister and he's been trying to find you for years. And here you were bringing my mail all the time. I'm going there for Christmas tomorrow. You must go, too, Peter—Mr. Manley. I'll wire them you are coming;" then she blushed crimson. The little seamstress had allowed her enthusiasm to run away with her for once. But Peter was equal to the occasion:

"I'd be glad to take you in my car, if you'll go, Miss Waters?"

And Miss Waters, who really was very careful of her pennies, murmured: "That would be fine."

All the rest of his route Peter kept saying to himself:

"Two brothers married two sisters and they all were together first on Christmas day," and every one that met Peter that day was hailed with such a "Merry Christmas" as Peter had never shouted at them before.

Cheese Rind for Birds

In a recent discussion of the best way of feeding birds in the garden, one experimenter put forward the rind of a Stilton cheese as the supreme Christmas fare! Birds of many sorts, especially the robin, are greedily fond of it. They have a desire for fat and the cheese provides this in association with other virtues. If we feed birds for the sake of watching them as well as comforting them, the rind, if preserved in more or less unbroken form, has the advantage that it cannot be carried away and attracts five or six species of bird if no more.—London Spectator.

TRUE DETECTIVE STORY
by Vance Wynn © Public Ledger

The Man With the Unusual Voice

ONE of the most remarkable detective stories from real life ever known in this country developed from the robbery of Mrs. Francis Walton, a wealthy widow, living in New York, about a year ago.

Mrs. Walton had a home on East Eleventh street, and was alone, with the exception of a maid.

During the latter part of the year she engaged a negro to look after the furnace and do heavy work.

One day he asked her to come to the cellar to inspect a defective faucet. The moment she reached the basement two men emerged from a dark corner and bound and gagged her.

Then, while the third man watched the maid to see that she did not interfere, the two strangers went through the house and ransacked it of all the valuables they could get their hands on.

Captain Arthur Carey, of the homicide bureau, was placed on the case, and he started to try to find the culprits from the description that was given him of the furnace man.

He was engaged under the name of Thomas Smith, but the detective was satisfied that it was an alias.

He made a search of the rogues' gallery and finally came across a picture that corresponded with the description. Mr. Walton was sent for and said at once that he was the man who had led her into the cellar.

His real name was Owen Loop.

The police combed the city and succeeded in finding him.

At the same time they arrested two other men who were suspected of being the culprits in the case.

Now, the difficulty was in identifying these men.

Mrs. Walton was unable to help the authorities in this particular because the cellar was dark and she did not have the opportunity of seeing the men who had tied and bound her.

But she had a vivid recollection of their voices, and recalled the fact that one of the men had touched her face while he was readjusting the gag.

In a word, her sense of hearing and of feeling was acute, and she ventured to say that she would recall the voices of the men if she ever heard them again.

One man, she recalled, had an unusual voice, and she was sure she would know it if she heard it anywhere under any circumstances.

Captain Carey thereupon determined to try an original experiment.

He had Mrs. Walton call at police headquarters and placed her in a chair behind a screen.

To make the test all the more absolute, she was blindfolded.

After that seven men were brought into the room and placed on the other side of the screen.

Two of them, Tillquist and Burnfield, were the suspects.

The others were men who had been brought in on trivial charges.

Each man was given a number. Tillquist was the seventh man.

Then the detective commanded each man to speak.

He was asked a question and told to answer it in a clear voice.

They were ignorant, needless to say, of the presence of the woman on the other side of the screen. Mrs. Walton, on her part, did not see any of the men.

No. 1 spoke, but awakened no interest on the part of the listener on the other side.

So it was with No. 2 and others.

Finally Tillquist replied to a question.

Instantly Mrs. Walton arose from her seat, her face expressing recognition.

"That's the man!" she exclaimed. "No. 7 is the man who spoke in the cellar. I will never forget that voice."

That test was sufficient for the police authorities, but in order to make certain Mrs. Walton suggested that she be given the opportunity of feeling the touch of their fingers on her face.

So the second test was made, with the woman still blindfolded.

This time Tillquist was given another place in the line.

All seven touched her face, or at least four of them, for when Tillquist did so she exclaimed promptly.

"That's the man—I'm sure of it."

Thereupon he confessed to his part in the attack and robbery.

The others admitted the truth and were tried and promptly convicted.

All were sent to Sing Sing prison with sentences of five, ten and fifteen years respectively.

It was the most remarkable case of identification in the history of the police department.

Difference in Ostriches

The South American ostrich is a different bird from the South African. Its scientific name is Rhea Americana. The rhea is a smaller creature than the South African bird, standing only from 30 to 40 inches tall. The South Africans stand six feet sometimes. However, the rhea has fine feathers and was described by a great naturalist as "the noblest avian type on the great bird continent." Most of the birds are naturally grayish, or with mixed gray and white feathers, but, in recent years, an albino type was discovered. Its plumes are especially valuable.

JUST IN TIME

The aerodrome was crowded with spectators who had come to witness the finish of the big air race. Great was their astonishment when the winning aeroplane landed and an unknown airman stepped out.

"Wonderful! Wonderful!" said an official, coming forward to greet him. "You've broken the record for the race. How did you do it?"

The airman wiped his perspiring brow.

"To tell you the truth," he modestly explained, "I think luck had a lot to do with it. I didn't find out until five minutes ago how to stop the engine.—Answers.

The Merry Minstrels

"You know Joe, the great base runner who went lame?"

"Yes, I know Joe, the great base runner who went lame. What about Joe, the great base runner who went lame?"

"He got a job as an ump."

"How is he now?"

"Now he's going blind."

A Respectful Skeptic

"Do you believe George Washington always told the uncompromising truth?"

"No, sir," answered Senator Sorghum, with emphasis. "To hold such an opinion would be to cast aspersion on his indisputable attainments as a statesman and a diplomat."

Sweeping

Full of enthusiasm, she had gone in for politics and was out of the house most of the day. The other night she returned at nine o'clock and sank into an armchair.

"Everything's grand," she said. "We're going to sweep the country."

Her husband looked around wearily and said: "Why not start with the dining room?"

THAT'S DIFFERENT

She—Didn't I say I never wanted to set eyes on you again?

He—Yes, but I never said that about you.

Proclivities

"We are told of the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

"Those are the very words," answered Senator Sorghum. "But they don't apply to persons who can't enjoy themselves unless they are playing rough with machine guns."

From Theory to Practice

"Weren't you once what they called a parlor socialist?"

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne, "but food expense has driven socialists out of the parlor. They are now discussing the kitchen, and even the bath room."

Personal Viewpoint

"What are you going to do about the coming election?"

"Not much, I'm afraid," said Senator Sorghum. "The question in my mind is what the coming election is going to do about me."

Complete Replacement

Blinks—I'll soon have a new car.

Jinks—You're lucky.

Blinks—Hardly. You see I'm simply kept busy replacing the worn-out parts on the old one, and a couple more bumps and it will even have the streamline effect.

Going to Extremes

"Our cook is terribly temperamental."

"So's ours. We never know whether it'll be angel cake or devil's food."

HOMESICK

"Shut that door! Where were you brought up—in a barn?"

The man addressed complied meekly and silently. The first speaker observed that he was in tears, and going over to the man, he apologized.

"Oh, come," he said, soothingly, "you shouldn't take it to heart because I asked if you were raised in a barn."

"That's it, that's it," sobbed the other. "I was brought up in a barn, and it makes me homesick every time I hear an ass bray."—Tit-Bits.

Reminder

"So you enjoy talking over the radio?"

"Very much," answered Senator Sorghum. "I have a positive affection for a microphone. It's appearance reminds me of earlier oratory, as it suggests the facial expression of some of my dumbest listeners."

War Signal

Usher at wedding, to cold, dignified lady—Are you a friend of the groom?

The Lady—Indeed, no, I am the bride's mother.

Evolution Two Ways

"Do you believe in evolution?"

"Forward and backward," answered Senator Sorghum, "although I'll never believe it's as easy to make a man out of a monkey as it is for a man to make a monkey out of himself."

Hasn't Paid Yet

Neighbor—How is that new incubator doing which you bought?

Mrs. Newbride—I suppose it's all right, but I'm a little worried about it. It hasn't laid a single egg yet.

Outlook Is Bright For Reducing "Take"

By J. W. MARCHBANK

At the coming session of the Legislature the important question of reducing the commission on pari mutuel pools at the race tracks of the state will be taken up for comprehensive consideration. On all sides it is predicted that the far-seeing members of both the Senate and the Assembly will decide to make a substantial cut of the present "take" of 12 per cent, probably to 9 per cent.

California is not the only state wrestling with the problem of the wisest course to pursue in the garnering of income from the tracks that give enjoyment to a large proportion of our citizenry. Maryland faces a grave situation as the onerous taxation of its plants threatens to put the sport out of business. That is an angle hat is sometimes forgotten—if the state takes too much the game is killed, and no revenue whatever is secured.

The lack of knowledge in regard to race tracks and the proper way to tax them was demonstrated a short time ago when a professor of the University of Maryland suggested, in a public address, that additional revenue for the state could be raised by increasing the taxes on race tracks. We look as a usual thing to our universities for enlightenment, but here was a case where an educator was groping around in the murkiest kind of darkness.

Governor-elect Harry W. Nice of Maryland has been quoted as saying:

"Maryland racing should not be taxed to the point of destruction."

Here in California the danger is imminent; as I have pointed out a number of times in my campaign for the reduction of the "take" from 12 to 9 per cent, the only way to present high class racing is by having a reasonable commission on the pari mutuel pools. If the state wishes to have racing continue and wishes to protect the revenue derived from it, the state must be fair and not demand a "cut" that will compel the tracks to close.

All that is needed to make a happy marriage is a giving husband and a forgiving wife.

SHEEP CREEK MINE IS RUN SMOOTHLY MEETING EXPENSES

Ample Power Is Available And New Mill Projected Early Next Spring

Standing out among the cleanest and most efficiently operated mining projects of the Nelson district is that of Gold Belt Mining Co., in the Sheep Creek camp, where, within one year, under direction of Harold Lakes, M.E., a raw prospect has been converted into a producing mine, ready for mill-installation of 50 tons capacity, now under consideration of directors.

The property embraces 33 claims, held by crown grants, location and under option. The main Gold Belt lies westerly of Mother Lode and Nugget claims of Reno Gold Mines and north of Queen mine of Sheep Creek Consolidated.

Six veins outcrop on the ground, as follows, enumerating from south to north, or up the mountainside: Bruce, D, C, B and A, with approximate distance, from south to north, of 1600 feet.

Major development has so far been largely confined to the Bruce, D and C veins, which are all crosscut by tunnels No. 2 and No. 6, with maximum depth, on C vein, which is the furthest in, of 600 feet. Even greater depth will be gained on veins B and A as these crosscuts are pushed forward.

Fissures In Quuartzite

Average width of the veins is around 2.6 feet, with high grade ore showing width of from six inches to one foot. All veins are practically vertical.

The series of fissure veins occur in alternating bands of quartzite and schists dipping 60 degrees to the east, with strike of N. 15 degrees east. The veins intersect these bands at almost right angles with strike of N. 60 to 80 degree E. and stand almost vertical.

The veins extend through both the quartzites and schists but values are found in a general way only in the quartzites and fades out quickly in the schists.

The Sheep Creek area shows three main quartzite belts as follows, starting from the west: Reno-Queen-Gold Belt; Mother Lode-Nugget-Kootenay Belle and that containing the eastern orebody of Mother Lode.

Development Extensive

Up to date about 3672 feet of underground work has been completed upon the Gold Belt proper, as differentiated from the contiguous Golden Belle group, held under option.

Bruce vein has been developed for a length of 260 feet on No. 2 level and for 352 feet on No. 6 level; vein for 710 feet on No. 2 and 269 feet on No. 6 and C vein for 211 feet on No. 2, and 60 feet on No. 6.

High grade shipments have been made from time to time, during the past eight months, total to date being over 200 tons.

High-Grade Product

Twenty-six tons from Golden Belle group returned an average of 1.26 ozs. gold per ton at Trail smelter; 135 tons from Gold Belt returned 2.35 ozs. and the last carload, also from Gold Belt, ran 1.5 oz.

The highest grade carload came from D vein and yielded 4.2 ozs. per ton, or $142.80, with gold at $34, while three carloads from C vein have averaged 1.5 oz.

For many months the mine has been self supporting, a record not achieved by any similar enterprise at the same stage in the Nelson district.

Present plans include development of Bruce, D and C veins by raises from No.6 to No. 2 level, a distance of 350 feet, with sublevels at regular intervals, and extension of No. 2 level to intersect veins B and A in order named.

Completion of this major work will, it is believed, amply warrant installation of a 50-ton flotation plant, contemplated for next spring.

A millsite has already been selected on Sheep Creek at a point requiring tramway connection of 6000 feet.

A force of 16 men is employed, with Mike O'Donnell, well known as one of the locaters of the Reno group, as foreman, and Jack Chapman, another old-time, as engineer.

Modern Camp

The Gold Belt workings are approached over a good automobile road, built by the company as a branch of the Reno road from a point three miles from Sheep Creek, and two miles long, at expense of over $2000.

A modern camp, including boarding house and two bunkhouses, to accommodate a force of 30 men, has been constructed, electric lighted and with every other reasonable comfort.

Power for motor-driven Sullivan angle compressor developing 1000 cubic feet of free air, is derived from the Reno line from the hydro-electric plant on Sheep Creek. A steel sharpener and other electrical equipment is housed with the compressor in a building which also contains the blacksmith shop.

Power Line Completed

It is expected that power from the new line of West Kootenay Power & Light Co. will be turned on within a week from this date and will be conducted over the Reno line, for the present at least.

It will insure ample power for all operations henceforth. Since August 1st, operations have been slowed down by lack of flow in Sheep Creek, from which Reno power has hitherto been derived.

WARN AGAINST POOR LIGHTING

With the holiday season once more at hand, warning signals are being sounded by many organizations against the risking of any unnecessary fire hazard accompanying careless or inefficient decoration and lighting of Christmas trees. It is only a comparatively few years since Christmas was too often turned from a day of rejoicing to a day of grief by the extreme hazard presented by the use of wax candles in windows and on trees and inflamable material used for decorations.

With the introduction of electric lighting for decoration, strings of electric lights for trees and electrically lighted wreaths for windows and doors replacing the perlious wax candles, much of this risk has been done away with. The only possible danger is in use of cheap substandard equipment, and that danger can be obviated by observance of the suggestion of the Pacific Coast Electrical Bureau that only those appliances should be used which carry the label of the Underwriters' Laboratories.

Effort has been made over a number of years by the bureau to bring about the enactment of ordinances prohibiting the sale of any sub—standard electrical apliances, and many municipalities have taken steps to protect their citizens by enacting and enforcing such ordinances.

The bureau also urges that when purchasing household electrical appliances and lamps, either for their own use or for gifts, buyers insist upon approved standard appliances.

Suggestions for a safe and sane holiday season include the use of standard fuses, plugs, sockets, and lamps. Cheap equipment is not only more expensive in the long run, but is dangerous.

Appliances should be detached when not in use.

Wires should not be hung over uninsulated nails, nor extension cords run over door or window sills where friction may wear off the insulation.

Beware of Carbon Monoxide

Don't warm up your car in a garage or closed space, warns the National Automobile Club. This is a dangerous practice, due to the presence of carbon monoxide (motor exhaust gas), which takes only three minutes to do its deadly work.

If your garage has an inclined floor, just coast backward to the open air and start the engine there. It is wise, also, to refrain from driving with all windows in the car closed. Sometimes a small defect in the exhaust system allows sufficient gas to enter the car, causing sleepiness to tbe occupants. People who suffer with headaches after driving should satisfy themselves that carbon monoxide is not the cause.

Anyway, Adam never made Eve listen to a wheeze about his mother's cooking.

COLUMN OF N. R. A. FACTS

INFORMATION regarding the N. R. A. will be furnished each week by W. H. CLAY, Chairman of the local N. R. A. Publicity Committee.

Corporation reports for the nine months ended September 30, 1934, show definite gains. While a few still report deficits, these are smaller than for the period last year. In most cases 1933 deficits have been turned into 1934 profits and small 1933 profits into larger 1934 profits.

In the month of November, seventy-five corporations paid nearly $43,000,000 in dividends over and above the rates previously prevailing. More than $35,000,000 of this sum was in the form of extra dividends. At the same time, many corporations which had resumed dividend payments announced stock dividends and paid something on dividends previously deferred.

In the last week of November, for the first time since the middle of September bank clearings showed a gain over the similar week of last year. The difference was 2.2 per cent. The twenty-two cities outside New York registered a gain of 18 per cent, but the general average was lowered by New York, which ran minus 5.2 per cent.

The American Banker, the monthly magazine of the American Bankers' Association, states that the number of depositors in Savings institutions on June 30, 1934, were 52,729,432, and the number the year before, 39,262,442. Further, the magazine reports, 1294 banks which were closed after the banking holiday in 1933 have reopened this year, and the total number of banks now operating on an unrestricted basis is 15,936.

Three hundred employers operating under the Machinery and Allied Products Industry held an important meeting in Cincinnati recently. Their deliberations are interesting to the whole business world since it is apparent their consensus is that there is a coming demand for heavy machinery. Many old machines are obsolete and will need to be scrapped. Factories and shops have delayed replacement until a serious situation approaches.

As the year draws to a close it appears that the total output by steel mills for 1934 will be 25,000,000 tons, as against 22,600,000 last year—a gain of 10.6 per cent.

Some increase in employment is indicated by the advance in the steel industry. The American Iron and Steel Institute reports that payrolls in October totalled $32,723,909, as against $29,142,892 in September, a gain of 12 per cent.

October was an encouraging month for builders. The United States Bureau of Labor Statistics has announced that reports from 766 cities, each with a population of 10,000 or more, show that the value of repairs for which permits were issued was higher than for any month since August, 1931. The increase in the value of additions, alterations and repairs over September was 36 per cent. Building operations were 25 per cent more numerous this October than last and their value was 33.1-3 per cent higher.

In the week ending November 24, electric power production stood at 95.3 on the New York Index as against 89.8 for the corresponding week of last year, an increase of 5.5 points. The index of general business activity reached 76.8, or 3.1 points higher than for the week last year.

Retail sales are still advancing. While some states suffered declines because of unseasonably warm weather, the country as a whole advanced from 3 per cent to 5 per cent for the week and made a record of from 8 per cent to 12 per cent higher than last year's.

The textile business is now coming into its own and some woolen mills have so depleted their stocks that they can not make deliveries on current orders before February. Men's wear woolen and worsted fabrics have gone up from 15 cents to 17½ cents a yard above the low point of the year, but the advance has not checked the flow of new business.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK

To Expedite Code Enforcement. The National Industrial Recovery Board is moving definitely to assist government representatives and Code Authorities to effectuate code compliance. It has appointed Sol A. Rosenblatt, Director of Field Administration and Enforcement. He is to coordinate activities of the Compliance and Litigation Divisions and cooperate with other governmental agencies. Ten regional compliance offices are being set up to receive reports of the State Compliance Directors, to adjust difficult cases, and when necessary, to start court proceedings. A. G. McKnight, Special Assistant General Counsel, will make a nation-wide survey of conditions bearing on code operation and enforcement.

To Study Auto Industry: President Roosevelt, in a letter to Chairman S. Clay Williams, has directed the NIRB to make a study of the possibilities of regularizing employment and otherwise improving employment conditions in the auto manufacturing industry. The study should be impartial, the President said, and suggested that the work be undertaken by the Division of Research and Planning in collaboration with the Bureau of Labor Statistics and other Federal agencies. Ample time will be allowed all interested parties to consider the findings and to present their views.

Prison-Made Goods: A special investigating committee, appointed by direction of the President, has recommended to the NIRB that the permission granted several states to use NRA labels on prison-made goods be withdrawn, or that the labels be changed to announce that the garments on which they appear are "prison-made", and that $50,000,000 of PWA funds be used in the next two years to buy up such goods for the FERA. The NIRB has appointed S. Clay Williams, Sidney Hillman and Linton Collins to confer with the FERA.

To Curb Design Piracy:...The code of the textile print roller engraving industry has been amended to aid in the suppression of design piracy. The members, hereafter, will engrave only designs which have been duly registered with the Textile Design Registration Bureau, maintained by the Federated Textile Industries, Inc., unless they are "stable" designs, such as polka dots. Most silks and cottons are printed with designs. Few designs are woven in. For years, the leaders in the fight against design piracy have sought the cooperation of the roller engravers' as their adherence to the movement would make it impossible for the pirates to get other designs on rollers.

Construction Board Urges Move Toward Stability: With the thought of getting wage variations out of consideration when construction bids are made, the employer and employe members of the construction industry's Planning and Adjustment Board have presented a report, urging members to renew the wage and hour agreements that have recently been allowed to expire. For a number of years, such agreements between industry groups and labor unions have been in existence in the larger centers. Chairman S. W. Jones says that "uncertainty and discontest, due to the absence of wage base, are destroying the traditional foundation of stability and good will upon which the future of the industry must be built."

Windoy Glass Manufacturers Get a Code: The window glass manufacturing industry code goes into effect this month. Though window glass is a very common and widely distributed product, there are only seventeen manufacturing establishments in the industry and three of these receive 75 per cent of all orders. In 1929, when many new windows were being installed, the industry had 5000 workers. The number fell off to 3000 in the depression, but has now risen to about 4500.

Labels: About seventy-five or eighty codes provide for the use of labels to show the consuming public that the articles to which they are atached are made under prescribed NRA code conditions. How many of these little reminders are pursuing their mission to keep the general public awake to the need of standing behind the recovery program may be guessed from a recent report of the umbrella industry code authority to the NRA. So far, 5,000,000 NRA labels have been distributed to member manufacturers, it says.

Use Of NRA Labels Spreading: A new amendment to the light sewing industry code requires manufacturers of mattress covers, comforts and quilts to affix NRA labels to their articles. So, we will not carry the labels on our clothing and umbrellas, but the NRA may recall itself to our memories just before we go to sleep at night. If the proposed supplemental code for the sponge industry, now being considered at public hearings, is approved, the sleepers may awaken in the morning to scrub themselves with sponges equipped with NRA tags.

NIRB Gives Santa Claus a Break: For several weeks machines of the Westinghouse Electric Company have been striving to install a movable electric stairway in one of the national capital's leading department stores to provide for the Christmas rush. They failed to make the grade. So, the company asked the NRA to permit it to work its men overtime till they complete the job and permission was granted.

Razor Makers Not Allowed To Cut Workers: The Code Authority of the razor manufacturing industry has received an answer to its question as to whether workers could be docked for Christmas Day off. The NIRB rules that employers may not dock workers for taking off legal holidays, unless that was their custom before codification.

Packers And Alteration Workers On Holiday Schedule: Skilled packers and alteration workers will be allowed to work overtime now and the end of the year. Extra work in peak periods is permitted under the retail trade code. They may work eight hours extra a week, but not more than two hours extra a day, and will receive time and a third for their additional hours of labor.

OLD HISTORICAL DATA OF THE COLMA VALLEY

Incidents of Pioneer Days and Characters Recalled For Our Readers

(By An Old-Timer)

REUNION OF PIONEERS

While in the presence of three very prominent Colma Valley ladies, Mesdames Smith, Sturla and Dennis, Monday evening, the writer of these reminiscence stories was impressed with the perfectly natural expressions of the ladies that many of the very oldest pioneers are not mentioned. In explanation, owing to my affliction for the past five months with myositos or musculr rhumatism, I have had to depend almost entirely upon the files of the Record of twenty five years ago and more or less reliable imagination. It is my desire to recount a perfect history of everything of interest in the Colma Valley, and to do this I must either get in touch personally with the old timers of more than twenty-five years ago or have the information given me by those older pioneers themselves or by their decendants; that, I am sure, will materially improve the interest in these stories. So, those of you who are interested, please send in anything of interest, and I assure you that your wishes will materialize, because I am anxious to mention all those sturdy pioneers who helped blaze the trail for this thrifty young city. In this connection, how would it do to have a grand reunion of old pioneers? It would certainly be of great interest to everybody and no doubt the city newspapers would play up the reunion with liberal illustrations and publicity.

'Twas early in December, 1909, when the movement was started by prominent San Franciscans to secure the location of the Panama Pacific International Exposition at Laguna De La Merced, and from time to time barbecues and picnics were held to boost the proposition. At one of these booster gatherings a real snow storm occurred that covered the ground over San Francisco to the depth of an inch, but in an hour the snow vanished except on the San Bruno hills, south of the Colma Valley, where it remained several hours. Snow very rarely comes to San Francisco region and there were many grown up Native Sons and Daughters who had never seen snow.

Mrs. Edna Mattson, 34, a native of Finland, committed suicide by taking carbolic acid at her home on Peoria street, Crocker Tract. She was in poor health and at the time she ended her life her husband had gone to make arrangements for her to go to a sanitarium, it was learned at the inquest held by Coroner Brooke of Half Moon Bay.

A pretended purchaser of the Fulk's marble works, after partaking of the kind hospitality of several people, folded his tent one night and faded away.

A. Vogler, who had his hand mangled in the bread mixer at his Vista avenue bakery, was operated on and several crushed bones of the hand had to be taken out.

T. L. Steele erecting a nice cottage on the lower end of Los Angeles avenue in the Mission tract.

F. S. Knowles and family moved to their new residence at 1552 Sacramento street, San Francisco, December 20, 1909.

Mrs. M. Rae returned from the bedside of her son at Petaluma, where he was seriously ill with typhoid fever.

Mrs. G. W. Matthews of McPherson, Kan., visited her brother and family, H. A. Gregory, on Santa Ana avenue.

Mrs. Schafer of St. Louis visited the family of her sister, Mrs. Nellie La Fontain, on Los Olivos avenue.

Mrs. Richard Kennedy of San Carlos avenue, Hillcrest, visited her sister in Oakland.

Mrs. J. D. Young and niece, Maybell Higby, of International Falls, Minn., spent the holidays with her stepson, Harry Young, on Price street.

Mrs. J. Wilson of Hillcrest drive and her mother left for Monterey to file on government homestead claims. Mr. Wilson followed a week later.

One of the outstanding holiday events was the open air barn dance on the vacant lot across Mission road, opposite the White House saloon, at which Duck Sullivan and Louis Nava were managers. An effort was made to get the affair announced by the pastor of the M. E. Church. All the boys had chipped in to remodel that refugee shack into the church and they were peeved because the sky pilot refused. It was suggested that several teams be secured to remove the church shack to the dance location, but better judgment prevailed when the boys were told that the shack would be in the way. The dance was a howling success—particularly howling—but no gun toters were allowed by Constable Carroll.

Rhenmatism necessitated the removal of Editor Brown to the German Hospital (now the Franklin Hospital) under the care of Dr. P. D. Rowland, where he remained several weeks. During the editor's illness the Record was in charge of Mrs. Natina Flaherty, commencing with the issue of December 19, 1909; and, of course, the paper showed a marked improvement.

"Broadway BILL"

WARNER BAXTER and MYRNA LOY

CHAPTER II

WHAT HAS HAPPENED BEFORE

Dan Brooks has given up the life he loves, that of the race tracks, to settle down in Higginsville as the husband of Margaret Higgins, daughter of the town's most powerful man. Disliking paper boxes, the business J. L. Higgins has turned over to him, and disliking the Higgins regime, Dan quits cold. His idea is to enter his beloved horse, "Broadway Bill," in the races. At a meeting at the Higgins home, he announces his resignation.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Alice's pajama legs whipped about her limbs as she paced the room. 'Of course I applauded' Why shouldn't I applaud? I saw a man root himself up from a grave."

'What sort of talk,' said J. L., sitting on Alice's bed, 'is this?"

'Strange, isn't it? Strange talk for this royal household' Daddy dear, your little monarchy is fast folding up. Your Crown Prince has flown. You're a strong and powerful ruler, oh Mighty King—but you're not going to crush him under your heels any longer!"

'Stop this nonsense' What's the matter with you!"

'It took him three years, but he finally crawled out from under. You nearly succeeded. You nearly succeeded in destroying him. But he was too strong for you. He was too strong for Higginsville. I always knew he was. I always knew he'd save himself in time."

J. L. spoke shrewdly. 'You're very happy about his going, aren't you?'

"Happy' I could shriek' I could go out on the roof-tops and shriek till I collapse.' Alice's voice broke. "Th-that's how happy I am. I prayed for him every night. I hope he never comes back. I hope he never sets foot in Higginsville again'" She fell across the bed, sobbing.

J. L. watched her for a long moment. He realized now—she loved him. "Perhaps," he said tenderly, "it's just as well that he left."

Then Alice knew he understood. 'Oh, Dad—" She threw her arms around him. Her head sank on his shoulder. She sobbed pitifully—then . . . sleep.

In the distance, a Ford truck bumped over the dirt road, its clatter marring the stillness of the night. In the back stood "Broadway Bill." Whitey, his ebon face beaming, sat beside Dan . . . the moon smiled down . . . the gypsies were on their way. A fragment of song sailed into the sky.

"—we're headin' for the last round-up . . ."

The Imperial Race Track' Dan was back in old territory now. He moved easily, freely. The life—the one and only life! Prouder than if he had sold a million paper boxes. Dan waited for the receipt for the fifty dollars he had managed to scrape together to nominate "Broadway Bill" for the big race.

'Here,' said Collins, the Jockey Club Secretary, "is your receipt."

"Thanks. Now how about a stable?"

"Oh, say, I'm terribly sorry, Dan. I had one stable left and just gave it to 'Gallant Lady!' Whitehall insisted on the whole place for himself. Threatened to take 'Gallant Lady' out of the race if—"

Dan smiled. "Oh, sure—you couldn't afford to do that. Without 'Gallant Lady you wouldn't have an attraction."

"That's it. Tell you what you do. Go over and see Pop Jones." He pointed out the window. "See that shack over there? That's Pop Jones place. He's got an old barn you can use."

"Okay."

"I'm terribly sorry. I wish—"

"Aw, that's all right. 'Broadway Bill' isn't very fussy. Been brought up in a barn all his life. S'long, Mr. Collins. Thanks."

"Good luck to you."

Dan met Whitey outside. As they walked towards the dilapidated truck, Dan grinned. "That's done! Well, we got him nominated for the Handicap!"

"I jus' can't get happy 'bout dat, boss."

"Why not?"

"What we gonna do for eatments? When Ah gets hungry, Ah gets hungry."

"That's simple, Whitey. When you're hungry you eat. Never want to go without food. It's bad for your stomach."

"You ain't tellin' my stomach nothin'! But where we gonna git the money to buy it?"

"Guess we'll just have to rely on the old man with the whiskers."

"Who dat?"

"Why, that's the miracle man. Anytime the old man with the whiskers puts his arms around your shoulders, your troubles are over."

"Hey, dat's a good guy to meet up with. Hope he comes around befo' Ah gits too hungry."

In a little while, 'Broadway Bill' was installed in the ramshackle barn. Pop Jones hovered near solicitously.

"Fine, Pop," said Dan, 'looks all right."

Pop threw out his chest. 'Had some pretty good hosses stay here."

'Who's the feed man around here?"

"Feed man? Me."

'You? Well, that's swell. Better put a supply of stuff in. Oats, bran, corn, carrots — everything. And don't forget the salt. About ten pounds."

Pop sniffed. 'This for cash—or credit?"

Dan swung around. 'What do you mean—cash or credit?" He thrust his hand into his pocket. 'What's the matter? Don't you trust me?"

'Oh, sure—sure, but—"

'Well, stop asking foolish questions. I settle all my bills at the end of the week. And another thing—have a couple of cots sent in here."

"Cots?"

'Yeah—cots. Something to sleep on. Look—maybe you don't know it, but there's a horse that's going to win the big Handicap. Think I'm going to let him stay here by himself? Listen. Behave yourself and I'll show you how to clean up a bankroll. This horse is a sleeper."

Pop hesitated a moment, then shrugging, walked out, the door creaking loudly behind him.

Whitey's eyes rolled. "Doggone it, Boss—he fell like a log."

"Sure he did. Did you see his eyes? C'mon, Boy, unpack the stuff. Looks like the old man with the whiskers is working already."

In a short while the baggage was unpacked. Dan, now, was a changed man, for his clothes reflected overbrimming prosperity. Whitey just stared and grinned.

"That," said Dan, "is the secret of the racetrack. Never look down in the mouth—no matter how hungry you are." He struck a pose. "Do you think Colonel Pettigrew will be impressed, Whitey?"

'Colonel Pettigrew? Who dat?"

"There's a gentleman. A man with a soul, a man with great understanding—a man you can borrow money from—if he has it."

"Hope he's got it, Boss. 'Cause if he's got it—you'll get it. All he gotta do is look at dem clothes."

Dan swung his cane. "Massah Colonel Pettigrew—y'are Ah come!"

It was quite a happy occasion. A very happy occasion. Colonel Pettigrew brought his very good friend, Happy McGuire, with him to the Ritz, where his other very good friend, Mr. Dan Brooks, had invited him for lunch.

It was a very happy occasion until Colonel Pettigrew tried to borrow fifty dollars from Dan for "a little proposition."

Dan laughed, loud and long. "Let me tell you a funny story, Colonel. I came here to borrow five hundred from you."

Happy, who had been partaking of soup, choked. The Colonel turned pale. "Don't tell me you're broke, Dan!" He started to laugh with Dan. 'Oh gee, that's the funniest—"

"What," said Happy hollowly, "is so funny about that?"

The situation was saved by quick thinking and a little soup. With a sudden movement, Dan tipped a plate of soup over his lap as the waiter bent over the table. Immediately, the Colonel and Dan were fired with rage. The waiter's fault? Why certainly! The stupid—the awkward—the clumsy—

The trio left in a blaze of fury. What a hotel! What service! An insult to decent men!

So they ate hamburgers! Dan's walking stick proved a good trade-in with the lunch counter proprietor. Then the conversation turned to "Broadway Bill" and the five hundred dollars necessary as entrance fee for the horse in the big race. Five hundred dollars was and is a lot of money to three men who haven't a penny between them. Their only asset was their enthusiasm for Dan's horse.

"He's great! I tell you, Colonel," Dan raved, "if I can ever get him in that race—"

"Don't worry," the Colonel interrupted. "It's as good as done. From now on my time and wisdom are devoted to your welfare. You see—I have an idea—Edna!"

"A fifty-to-one-shot," said Happy. "You'd have to marry her first."

"Who," asked Dan, "is Edna?"

Happy grimaced. "The Vinegar Puss that runs the boarding house."

"Why should she expect you to marry her, Colonel?" asked Dan.

"Confidentially, Dan, I encouraged her. An economic necessity, you know."

'Perhaps,' he said tenderly "it's just as well that he left'

Oiling Cylinders

When a car has been idle for a long time, it is advisable to remove the spark plugs and pour about a tablespoonful of cylinder oil in each cylinder starting the motor, according to the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association.

This will cause the cylinder walls to be lubricated immediately and prevent scratching or "scoring" the dry metal surfaces.

WATCH YOUR KIDNEYS!

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood

YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering impurities from the blood stream. But kidneys get functionally disturbed—lag in their work—fail to remove the poisonous body wastes.

Then you may suffer nagging backache, attacks of dizziness, burning, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains; feel "all worn out."

Don't delay! For the quicker you get rid of these poisons, the better your chances of good health.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They tend to promote normal functioning of the kidneys; should help them pass off the irritating poisons. Doan's are recommended by users the country over. Get them from any druggist.

CHAPTER I

Mr. Theodore Gatlin's married life had demonstrated to him the absolute fallacy of the ecclesiastic contention that marriages are made in heaven.

In the beginning he had married Louise Hanchett for a number of reasons, none of them really important. She was of good family; i. e., her parents were prosperous middle-class folk whom scandal had never touched. They were eminently respectable if a trifle bovine in disposition and Louise was their only child, and sole heir to such worldly goods as her parents might have accumulated and which Mr. Gatlin believed they were not likely to dissipate; for which reason he did not contemplate having to support them in their helpless age.

These were the common sense reasons which his self-respect as a business man indicated he should conjure to his defense in making this important step; in reality they were merely a sop to his real reason for the step, which was a mad infatuation he mistook for love. Louise Hanchett's cold, classical beauty and Vere de Vere form, which she knew how to dress beautifully and in good taste, had so dazzled him that it never occurred to him to ask himself whether the object of his passion had wearing qualities; if she had common sense; if she was healthy and capable of bearing children; if she was of sound ancestry. However, there was some excuse for this carelessness in Mr. Gatlin's case, as, indeed, there is in the case of all but superman. Engaged as he was in the retail shoe business, he had never heard of Mendel's law, and if anybody, in conversation with him, had mentioned genetics, he would doubtless have thought that they were some new form of athletic contrivance. The only practical information he had on the Hanchett family was that Mrs. Hanchett was a shrew, that Mr. Hanchett was a middle-aged man whose head was bloody and bowed; that Louise was unhappy at home.

In Mr. Gatlin the protective instinct, abundant in all males, was particularly well developed; so he yearned to provide Louise with the happiness he knew she had missed and which he, thank God, was able to provide—for he possessed also the usual amount of masculine ego.

Following two years of married life, during which he strove manfully to accomplish the impossible, Mr. Theodore Gatlin went into a mental haze. Six months of this and he became peevish. He wanted a child—and when at last he realized that, in the phraseology of his times, there was nothing doing, there was born in him the first coherent thought he had ever had on the subject of matrimony. He told himself that he was sick unto death striving to be a good husband and acquiring no merit because of his efforts. He told himself he had a house but not a home; that Louise had "taken after her mother," which meant that he had taken after his afflicted father-in-law!

He gave considerable thought to the subject and finally decided that Louise would be all right if she only had something to occupy her mind. She sought happiness and blamed him because she could not find it. Mr. Gatlin did not know where happiness might be found, but inasmuch as he was moderately certain of peace of mind while attending to his business, he had a hazy impression that happiness is not infrequently found in securing a job and working at it. So when a physician informed him that his hopes of fatherhood were not apt to be realized he had a brilliant idea and broached it to Mrs. Gatlin.

"Let's adopt a baby!" he urged.

Louise demurred. She had her doubts as to the advisability of taking over somebody's else troubles—one never knew how an adopted baby was going to turn out—there was no hurry, anyhow—she must have time to consider the idea—her health.

"To h—l with your health!" Mr. Gatlin roared, for the first time in his married life becoming vulgar. "Every doctor you've had tells me you're organically sound. You only think you're sick."

"My nerves," she protested, but he silenced her.

"You think too much about yourself and not at all about anybody else, particularly me. What you need is a baby to fuss with. You'll learn to love it in a month as much as if it was your own flesh and blood."

"I'm afraid you'll not love it, Theodore. You're so cranky and irritable," she defended.

"Listen!" Mr. Gatlin commanded. "I'm at the point where I'm seriously considering suing you for divorce on the grounds that you're a barren woman. In other ways you don't measure up to my idea of a wife and companion. It's no fun for me to come home night after night and have to listen to your tales of woe—"

"You are devoid of sympathy," his wife charged. "You neglect me."

"Maybe I've failed," said Mr. Gatlin, "but by jiminy, I've tried, and I'm willing to keep on trying a little longer. Only, from now on, we're going to try my methods, and adopting a baby is one of them. If that fails I'll take the baby over myself and we'll call in the lawyers."

She knew she had gone as far as she dared. Even the dullest of married women know when that point is reached; that is, they know when it has been reached for that day.

"Well, if we can find a baby of good, sound, intelligent, healthy parentage," she assented grudgingly.

"I've got one staked out," Mr. Gatlin cried joyfully, "and I know its parents. They're sound as grindstones. I know the grandparents of the child on both sides.

"I don't know them personally," he went on, "but I've had a doctor look up their records. High class people. No insanity and no crookedness in them."

"I'll have to meet these grandparents and parents, Theodore."

"Unfortunately," he replied, "they're all dead."

"What did they die of?"

"The grandparents on both sides, of old age; the father of the baby was an army captain and he got killed in a fight in the Sulu islands. The mother died in childbirth and the baby is in the infants' shelter in San Francisco."

"Boy or girl, Theodore?"

"Boy."

"I could never stand a boy, Theodore. I must have a girl."

Mr. Gatlin grinned evilly. "I figured you'd try to edge out of it that way. It isn't a boy. It's a girl."

Louise Gatlin was not very intelligent, but she was sufficiently so to realize that for once in his life Mr. Gatlin was due to have his own way.

That night as he lay abed, Mr. Gatlin suddenly gave himself a prodigious poke in the ribs. "What a jackass I was not to consult that doctor before I married Louise," he groaned. "When I thought I could father a child of my own I didn't pay any more attention to its ancestry than I would to selecting a necktie. Anything that looked well would fill the bill. But when it came to selecting some other man's baby, I gave the job all the attention I would give to the purchase of a piece of property. I wouldn't think of buying a lot until I had run down the record of the title and satisfied myself there were no flaws in it. If men would only employ that much common sense in selecting their wives—or wives, in selecting their husbands—I knew what a nervous, complaining, selfish old shrew her mother was—what's that law the doctor spoke of? Ah, yes. Mendel's law. The law that like shall produce like. Simple! Natural! Any fool should have thought of that—and yet it took an old monk—a celibate—to promulgate the news. Whew—w—w—w!"

"Theodore," said his wife, from the other twin bed, "I should think you might be more considerate of me than to whistle like that and wake me up."

"I'm so happy, darling, I couldn't help it. Forgive me."

"Have you thought of a name for the baby?"

"I have. Penelope."

"A horrid name. Where under heaven did you get that name?"

To her unspeakable amazement he quoted a verse from Henry Herbert Knibbs' poem, "Out There Somewhere."

We'll dance a merry saraband from here
to drowsy Samarkand:
Along the sea, across the land, the birds are flying south,
And you, my sweet Penelope, out there
somewhere you wait for me,
With buds of roses in your hair and kisses on your mouth.

They went by train to San Francisco next day. With the child in his arms and accompanied by his wife and the lady manager of the infants' shelter, Mr. Gatlin repaired to the Superior court and legally adopted the daughter of Capt. Ronald Elliot and Janet Elliot, both deceased.

From the courtroom they went to Grace cathedral and had her baptized in the Episcopalian faith—out of courtesy to Mrs. Gatlin's latest religious crotchet, Mr. Gatlin having no religious affiliations whatsoever. There was a slight hiatus here. The pastor had just sprinkled water on the little dark head and said: "I baptize thee in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, and give thee the name of —" when Mrs. Gatlin interrupted softly—"Lucretia."

"Nothing doing," Mr. Gatlin declared. "Lucretia! Wasn't that the woman that poisoned people—a wop woman? Her name shall be Penelope. I like that name."

The pastor smiled faintly. Having already sensed that all of the enthusiasm for the child was Mr. Gatlin's, he was seized with a perverse desire to please the sentimental fellow, so he said quickly: "—and give thee the name of Penelope."

Mr. Gatlin hugged Penelope to him and kissed her back of the left ear.

"You mustn't kiss her, Theodore," his wife protested. "Kissing is unsanitary. You might give her some sort of disease."

"Oh, lord," Mr. Gatlin murmured. "will I ever cease making hideous mistakes?"

For in that illuminating instant he realized that in adopting Penelope he had made a terrible mistake. His wife didn't want her! At the very moment of the commencement of his experiment he knew it was a failure. However, it was no part of his wife's intention (at least for the present) that he should realize this, so she took the baby from him.

Within the week, Theodore Gatlin, having communicated with the adjutant general of the army at Washington, ascertained that Capt. Ronald Elliot's body had been brought home from the island of Sulu and interred in the national cemetery at the Presidio of San Francisco. So he had Penelope's mother disinterred from the Potter's field and reinterred beside the soldier, after which he gave orders for the erection of a suitable monument over them.

Viewing him from every angle, he was a most peculiar retail shoe dealer.

For a month all went well with the Gatlins, and then Mrs. Gatlin issued her fiat.

"Theodore," she said, "I must insist on one thing. Penelope must never know that you and I are not her natural parents. I feel that such knowledge might detract from her love for us."

"Boy or Girl, Theodore?"

"That won't work any hardship on me, my dear," he replied. "I feel just as enthusiastic about her as if I were her real father."

"Another thing, Theodore. I love Penelope dearly, as you know, but I can't be made a slave to her. Do you realize, dear, how she keeps me tied down?"

He gritted his teeth, and his wife went on: "We simply must have a nurse for her."

"Have two of 'em," he growled. "Whatever she needs she shall have."

"That's right. Start spoiling her immediately."

It was always like that. However, as the child developed, she brought Mr. Gatlin each day closer to happiness than he had ever been before. She was his refuge. She was a healthy baby and hence a happy baby, and there was not the slightest chance that she would ever be spoiled by having her own wishes perennially deferred to. If Louise Gatlin accomplished nothing else worth while (and this she accomplished unconsciously) she did nothing to inflate Penelope's ego, which, as everybody knows, is the breeding ground of human selfishness, which, in turn, accounts for the unhappiness of most of humanity. Mr. Gatlin, of course, would have undone, in secret, much of this good work, had not the realization come to him quite early in Penelope's little girlhood that any demonstration of excessive affection on his part was inevitably counteracted by an excessive severity on the part of his wife toward the child.

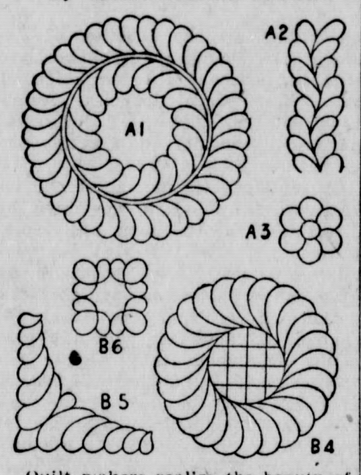
PERFORATED DESIGN FOR QUILT MAKERS

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK



Quilt makers realize the beauty of a finished quilt depends upon the patches used, the beauty in the patchwork design, and, most important, the quilting. If the quilting design is not accurately reproduced on the material it is impossible to quilt neatly and clearly. Many quilts are never finished, because the worker has no pattern or means to transfer all the quilting lines accurately. There are several ways of transferring quilting patterns to cloth, but the most approved and successful method is stamping the design through a perforated pattern, with stamping powder. This is the simplest and most economical way, and produces results that make quilting interesting. Each stamping is the same, and perfect. These patterns are already perforated on bond paper, and good for many stampings. Each stitch is indicated on the lines of the design, and the stamping can can be brushed off when quilting is finished, leaving the work neat and clean.

Grandmother Clark's package No. 33A contains perforated patterns of the designs shown, also stamping powder and full directions how to use them. Sizes of patterns are as follows: A1 Feather Circle, 12 inch; A2 Feather Border, 3 inch; A3 Motif, 3½ inch; B4 Feather Circle, 9½ inch; B5 Feather Corner, 7 inch; B6 Feather Square, 4 inch.

If you want your quilting to look right, send 15 cents to our quilt department and receive all of these, Lot 33A six perforated patterns by mail postpaid.

Literary Problem

Mrs. Nyland faces a problem of parental responsibility, but the more she ponders it the less possible of solution it appears.

For years she had read to her daughter, Nancy, from juvenile books befitting her years, but one day, when the girl had reached the age of five, she suddenly interrupted the reading with:

"I'm tired of those books, mumsy. All the girls in it are so goody-goody."

Mrs. Nyland was too shocked to make a suitable retort. But she admits that the younger generation is getting new ideas, whether from their elders, the movies, or what not.—New York Sun.

Every overseas veteran in Daly City and vicinity will be invited personally in the near future to membership in the Veteran of Foreign Wars of the United States in conjunction with the nationwide "Bonus mobilization" of this organization.

The Veteran of Foreign Wars offers to its members legal advice, legislative information and interpretation, assistance in obtaining hospital ization and many other types of services, always considering the interests and needs of disabled and deceased veterans.

SOME HEROES AND EXPLOITS OF EARLY TIMES

Colorful Achievements Of Paderewski, Famous Polish Pianist

(By Maude Larue Ives)

Ignace Paderewski was a Polish musician, one of the greatest pianists of all time. After achieving world-wide fame in his art he temporarily abandoned it to devote his energies to the cause of Polish freedom during the World War period. After a period of six years he resumed his piano concerts, giving convincing proof that he was still a supreme master of that instrument.

Paderewski was born in Podolia, Russian Poland, in 1860, the son of a gentleman farmer. At the age of six, he began his piano lessons, and showed such promise that he entered the Warsaw Conservatory when twelve, to lay the foundations of a great career. At sixteen he was giving concerts on tour, sometimes playing his own compositions, and at eighteen became a professor in the conservatory. About six years later he was given a similar position in the Conservatory of Strassburg.

Paderewski became a pupil of the famous Theodor Leschetzky in Vienna in 1884, and three years later began his brilliant career as a solo pianist. Successively he played to enthusiastic audiences in Vienna, Paris, London and the principal cities in America. He amassed a great fortune within a few years. In 1899 he married Baroness de Rosen and afterward spent much of his time on his great Polish estate. After 1901 he appeared in public concerts, but not often, and then confined his playing to his own compositions. Among the best of these are the short compositions, "A Love Song" and "Night Song." In 1902 his opera "Maura" was produced in the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, he himself conducting. He was very favorably received. Of various other compositions the "Minuet" is the most famous, in the opinion of the majority of musicians.

Paderewski's devotion to Poland during the World War is a part of modern history. He gave concerts to raise relief funds, helped enlist men for the Polish army, served as Premier of the new Polish republic, and represented his country at Versailles. Having depleted his fortune, he resumed his concert work in 1922 and again amazed his listeners by his marvelous technique and individuality of playing, in which there was a perfect combination of the emotional and intellectual.

The drought appears to be outdoing the AAA in the matter of reducing the wheat surplus.

NEWS NOTES OF PERSONAL INTEREST

Eugene Kay, a typical Southerner, who came to California in 1880 and was elected sheriff of Tulare County a year later, was in Daly City on Wednesday to see his boyhood friend, J. L. Brown. It is needless to say that the "boys" had a jolly time recalling incidents of the long ago. Mr. Kay retained his office until 1894, when he engaged in the cattle business in San Francisco, and his accounts of trips to that city via Pecheko Pass and the El Camino Real are quite interesting. His remembrance of El Portal (present business center of Daly City) was as a narrow passage through a ridge of huge rocks. He has resided in San Francisco for a number of years.

Mrs. Anne Welch of Gothe street, formerly of Theta avenue, is receiving condolences of her friends on the death of her father, David M. Smith, who passed away in Modesto last Wednesday. Funeral services were held Saturday and interment was at Cypress Lawn Cemetery.

GREATEST WORLD BIRTHDAY PARTY

(By Maude Larue Ives)

Time in all Christian countries is reckoned from the birth of Jesus, the Christ. His birthplace was Bethlehem, a little town in that Judea which had once been the seat of a Hebrew king, but was then a Roman province. On the imperial throne of Rome at the time sat the great Augustus, and historians state that, for the first time in centuries, the whole world was at peace and the doors of the temple of Janus in Rome were closed, as they always were in time of peace, for Janus was the Roman god of mythology, represented with a double head that looked both ways as he guarded the gates of the imperial city. In time of war the temple gates were left open.

The mother of Jesus was Mary, wife of Joseph, the carpenter, and to her his coming had been foretold long before his birth. His name of "Jesus", too, which means "help of Jehovah", or "Saviour," was chosen for Him thus early. As to the exact day of His birth there has been much controversy, but since the fourth century December 25 has been honored and celebrated as His natal day.

Miraculous circumstances attended the birth of Jesus, which occurred in the manger of an inn while Joseph and Mary were in Bethlehem to pay taxes to the Romans. Angels, according to the gospel account, announced the wondrous event to the shepherds, while those who sought for the infant king were guided to His resting place by a peculiarly brilliant star.

Meanwhile, from the Orient three wise men—Melchior, Balthasar and Gasper—came to do homage to the newborn King.

December 25 is a nation-wide birthday party celebrated by rich, poor, old and young, elaborately or simply as the case may be, but only the hearts of men can register the sincerity and love needed to make it a real Christmas.

Our first and greatest concern should be "to brighten up the corner where we are," to make our fractional part of this great old world—our community, in other words, a better place in which to live; for friendship and good deeds performed by us are remembered long into the years, while the material gift alone fades with the season.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LESSON SERMON

"Lo, he that formeth the mountains, and createth the wind, and declareth unto man what is his thought, that maketh the morning darkness, and treadeth upon the high places of the earth, The Lord, The God of hosts, is his name." These words from Amos comprise the Golden Text to be used Sunday, December 23, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be "Is the Universe, including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force?" Included among the Scriptural selections will be: "Praise ye the Lord Praise ye the Lord from the heavens: praise him in the heights. . . Let them praise the name of the Lord: for he commanded, and they were created" (Psalms 148: 1,5).

The following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included: "God creates and governs the universe, including man. The universe is filled with spiritual ideas which He evolves, and they are obedient to the Mind that makes them" (p. 295).

AUTO SHOW FOR PACIFIC COAST IS ON NEXT MONTH

Dealers Have Made Request For Practically All Space Remaining Available

Display space is at a premium for the forthcoming nineteenth Annual Pacific Auto Show, to be held in the Civic Auditorium, January 19 to 26 inclusive, it was announced here today.

With the show more than a month away, exhibitors' space is 50 per cent over subscribed, Manager Wahlgreen reported to the show committee of the dealer body. The only remaining space, that has not been contracted for and definately assigned, is a very limited amount of accessory space; and within the next day or two, Wahlgreen says, even this will all be gone.

Fred W. Pabst, chairman of the show committee for the 1935 event, says that this early sellout of display space was anticipated because of the great interest that had been shown in the show plans by the public many weeks before the salon was scheduled to open. With this preshow interest on the part of men and women who follow the automotive industry, it was only natural that the dealers should sense the trend and program their displays well in advance, Pabst points out.

The other members of the show committeeJWilliam L. Hughson, Art Knuckey, and Eaton McMillan—expressed themselves as well pleased with the arrangements completed by the show manager so far in advance of the event. The committee members predict that the show to be held next month will eclipse all other car salons staged in the West during past years.

"With the space all gone, the dealers are now working out the details of their activities for the show period," said Don Gilmore, president of the San Francisco Motor Car Dealers Association. "All indications point to a record breaking attendance, and the entire dealer body looks forward to the most successful show ever staged here. It has been five years since our display space has been over subscribed, and that is evidence that the dealers havea wonderful aray of new models to place before the public. From now on we will be counting the days until the show opens, and as the event draws near, enthusiasm should increase.

Arthur D'Ettel, business manager of the Motor Car Dealers Association, reports that his office is receiving hundreds of telephone calls daily from persons interested in the coming show. For the first time in the history of auto show there has been a great demand for season tickets, he says.

PREVENTION OF HOLIDAY GRIEF

(Contributed)

The joy of Christmas is dimmed in too many families by avoidable accidents. This year, make sure that your family will be safe from the greatest Yuletide danger—Fire. The Christmas tree, the source of so much pleasure, has all too often been the causeof grief.

All firemen suggest that the following precautions be taken during the holiday season.

Fix the tree firmly at its base. Most trees are placed in the corner of a room and the decorations are all placed on the front of the tree, causing the tree to lean forward. Tie a string to the stem of the tree and then fasten onto wall or base board, directly behind the tree, holding the tree safely and upright. Select the proper decorations, do not use cotton for snow effects, use standard wiring and see that chains of electric lights are properly installed. The safest method of all is a single colored spot light focused on the tree—very beautiful. Many trees have already been put up and for several weeks they are tinder for chance sparks from a match or cigaret.

And now for Santa Claus. The flowing robes and his cotton beard tempt fire. They should be rendered at least partially fireproof by spraying with water glass. Be careful and you will bring hppiness to those about you; be careless and grief may dampen your holiday spirit.
